

VETERANS & MILITARY SPOUSES

Each year, CareerSource Northeast Florida serves thousands of veterans who are transitioning to the civilian workforce or looking for a better job. In fact, many of our staff members have served in the military as well, so we understand what veterans need. When you come into our centers, you'll have priority access to our computer resources. We also have a team that takes services out into the community where we can connect with local military families. You'll find the schedule of where the Veterans Mobile Access Point team will be on our calendar at career-sourcenefl.com.

If you've been out of work for a significant amount of time or are facing personal issues that make it hard for you to find work, you can talk to our staff about what might be holding you back. We can connect you with a veteran's representative specifically trained to help you resolve issues, deal with a disability, or refer you to community resources and partners who can help.

We also understand the unique challenges that active duty military spouses experience in the workforce. In conjunction with frequent transfers, deployments, and moves, they may be taking on most of the parenting and household management responsibilities while their spouses are deployed, often without a local support network. They may also need flexibility in their work schedules and jobs/careers with skill sets that can travel with them to the next duty station.

We have a Military Family Employment Advocate whose job it is to assist active duty military spouses and working age dependents with finding employment. Our Advocate will help you understand the local labor market, provide career and interview coaching as well as help you make connections with local companies. To schedule an appointment at the Career Center nearest you, call (904) 356-JOBS (5627).
